Managing Performance through

Situational Leadership

Learn How to:

- Define and recognise a range of leadership styles
- Match leadership style to needs in a variety of situations
- Explain the levels of development used in situational leadership
- Analyse team members' feedback on their leadership style
- Apply course concepts to their own work situation

Management and leadership are complex because people are complex. Rather than adopt a "one size-fits-all" leadership style, leaders should be able to analyse a situation and determine the best response given the parties and issues involved.

With an increasing demand for leaders to manage the performance of their subordinates, it is becoming critical that managers are able to effectively manage and lead different employees in different situations. MANAGING PERFORMANCE THROUGH SITUATIONAL LEADERSHIP will equip you to do just that.
